CITIZENSHIP IS STRESSED BY SCOUT OFFICIAL

Roy Wyland Speaks of Educational Work at Dinner

C. L. BREWER PRESIDES

Training Program to be Started Here Within Thirty Days

"The nineteenth century was typified by a demand for the right of citizenship, and the twentieth century is emphasizing the obligations of citizenship," said Roy O. Wyland, head of the department of education of the National Council, Boy Scouts of America, at a dinner at the Tiger Hotel last night. "Our country owes nothing until we have first rendered service to our country," he said.

Mr. Wyland, who was here to discuss with University officials the Scout school to be opened in the summer, utilized the opportunity to speak in behalf of the educational drive that has been launched by the Scouts. Troop committeemen, Columbia scoutmasters, and executive committee members were present.

Wyland gave two addresses to the group. The first dealt with the more general statement as to the place of scouting in the educational program of America, and in particular the task of Scout leaders in making this program effective.

"The most outstanding advancement in the history of education has been made during the past fifty years," declared Mr. Wyland. "Education is today the largest industry in the land, with thirty million boys and girls in the public schools, four million in high schools, a million in colleges and universities, and a million more employed to carry forward the educational enterprise. The state's greatest investment is in education."

In speaking of the development of the Scout movement he said: "Scouting has swept through the world in the last twenty years in what might be called a 'great educational movement.' It has reached 8,000,000 boys and men in the world who have pledged themselves to the Scout oath. One-half of these are in America."

"Scouting is today equipped to serve boys anywhere, whether they be in the city, in the village, or in the congested areas of great cities. Scouting is universal in its appeal, is non-sectarian, and is without sectional boundaries."

New Field Executive Introduced
C. L. Brewer, president of the Central Missouri Scout Council, in his address, and had every person present introduce himself and tell of his connection with scouting. Following this, Mr. Brewer introduced Cecil G. Morrison, who has recently been added to the staff as field executive.

Mr. Morrison outlined the plans for the training program which is to be launched within thirty days in Columbia, in which Scout leaders are to be instructed in the fundamentals of the work.

Mr. Wyland left last night for Chicago, where he is to confer with national men, and going from there to Gary, Ind., to assist in setting up an experimental program in the Gary public schools.

International Conference Planned
Roy Wyland, head of the department of education and division of church relations of the Boy Scouts of America, in addressing a group of ministers and others at the Episcopalian Student Center yesterday morning, outlined the plans for the forthcoming international conference to be held in London to celebrate the 21st birthday of the Boy Scout movement.

About Water Softeners

By William Southern, Jr., in the Independence Examiner.

If the citizens of Columbia do not eventually force the addition of a softener to their municipal water plant it will certainly be through no dereliction of duty on the part of the Missourian in following voluminously and frequently the merits of the softener. That's not all, the Missourian usually has some interesting figures to submit with its argument for the process. Through a maze of figures it shows that Stephens College, which has had a softener in use since 1923, saves about $1000 per year by its use.
